Right now she is improving. There is no definitive end to chemotherapy according to her oncologist, however her CA marker went from 97000 in September to 187 as of yesterday.

Her CT abdomen which was completed the beginning of this month shows the tumour on her pancreas has shrunk by half. MRI shows lesions on her liver are just fatty tissue.

The oncologist is happy with how she is responding to the treatment so his plan going forward is to pause the chemotherapy (Gem/pax) until these side effects are under control. He plans to repeat bloodwork next week and see if the steroid and lasix had any effects on the swelling/inflammation, and if the pause in chemo treatment is helping the numbness/tingling and pain she's experiencing in her lower legs and feet.

Her weight was stable at 138lbs prior to chemotherapy, but has since increased to 168lbs with the fluid retention. Her appetite remains poor and she typically eats the same thing every day which is a protein shake and soup.

She is taking 5 (12mg) ivermectin tabs daily [Redacted] and 1 Fembendazole (500mg) (Happy healing store) daily. Due to gastric issues and poor appetite she is not able to take the recommended dose [Redacted] originally suggested, which is 2 tabs a day as it upsets her stomach and makes her sick. She started taking those medications in September.

KLÍČOVÉ BODY:

67letá žena z Ontaria s rakovinou slinivky břišní ve 4. stádiu

V září 2025 začala:

Ivermektin 1 mg/kg/den

Fenbendazol 1000 mg/den

Chemoterapie

Výsledky po 6 měsících: CA19-9 klesl z 97000 na 187 = pokles o 99,8 %.

Nemusím nikomu, kdo to ví, říkat, že CA19-9 z 97000 je na prahu smrti.

„Onkolog je s reakcí spokojený.“

„CT břicha ukazuje, že se nádor na slinivce břišní zmenšil na polovinu. Magnetická rezonance ukazuje, že léze na játrech jsou jen tuková tkáň.“
